Dru Lavigne and Doug Inkster

Dru Lavigne is currently the Editor-in-Chief of the Open Source Business Resource, a free monthly publication covering open source and the commercialization of open source assets. She is founder and current Chair of the BSD Certification Group Inc., a non-profit organization with a mission to create the standard for certifying BSD system administrators. A prolific author, she pens the popular FreeBSD Basics column for O'Reilly and is author of BSD Hacks and The Best of FreeBSD Basics.

Doug Inkster has been working in and around DBMS software since the early 1970's. Since 1994, he has worked on the Ingres server, most specifically as the architect responsible for Ingres query optimization, but also on various other components of the server.
