Craig Miller

Craig Miller is the author and current maintainer of expect-lite, an automation project. He developed the tool in 2005 and convinced his employer to open-source it in 2007. He has been a dedicated Linux and open-source user for over 10 years, is Red Hat certified and has been active in the LinuxPPC (powerpc) community.

Before moving to Canada, he was the Chief Engineer of a Public Radio station, a Society of Broadcast Engineers (SBE) Certified Senior Radio/TV Broadcast Engineer and networking expert with Bay Networks. In Ottawa, he has been creating embedded linux products at small to large companies including Seaway Networks, Spirent Communications, and Nortel.
