John Nash is happy to continue to serve on the board wherever his talents can be used.

Linux and friends have been very good to me as a user of Linux and free/libre software, a contributor of code to R (www.r-project.org), and a participant in a number of projects as a reviewer, tester or active user (complainer?). Through the meetings and informal gatherings of the Linux community, I continue to learn and grow my capabilities. I get a big charge out of the way Linux folk solve problems quickly and effectively, and hope to help OCLUG continue to lead such activities.
