John Nash

John Nash built his first computer (analog) in 1962. He since discovered Linux, which makes machinery run much better for him. He has been part of the Board for three years and is willing to continue to serve, as he took formal retirement from the Telfer School of Management in June 2008. However, in the spirit of renewal that OCLUG should foster, if there are eager and capable candidates who want to contribute, he is willing to continue as an ordinary member.
